SURROUNDINGS

Cavallino-Treporti is a land between the sea and the lagoon, rich in history and natural biotypes to be discovered, admired and preserved. The entire area is characterised by waters that define its boundaries; the coasts are in fact bathed by the salty waters of the Adriatic Sea, the brackish waters of the North Lagoon of Venice and the fresh waters of the River Sile (the latter is part of the river route known as the "Litoranea Veneta").

Cavallino-Treporti is part of the Venice and its Lagoon site, which became a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 1987 precisely because of its lagoon environment.
